a slow blink

i look for you my little since you slipped back under my bed come visit me again my sweet sweet i am boring myself to sleep

It has been both a revelation and a deception. A secret that renames itself : an extraordinary encounter, a story to brag about, a slippery greeting. A stubborn child runs after the hidden life of a fabulous character. A documentary on an imaginary companion and the longing for an impossible friendship.

The dance goes after what slips away just as it seems within reach. Moving along the threshold of visibility, it explores darkness as a material and a territory. A space where the familiar blurs away from the stable image, and unsettles the relationship between seeing and recognising.
